Still Actively Attends to Management of His Extensive Real Estate Holdings

Benjamin Franklin Webster, one of the best known citizens of this city, observed the 87th anniversary of his birth yesterday. He still takes an active part in the management of his extensive local real estate holdings and enjoys the best of health. Mr. Webster was born in Epsom and was the third son of Richard and Mary Webster. He received his primary education in the public schools of that town, later receiving instruction and Junior Wharves at 10 and 12. At the age of 17 he came to this city and became an apprentice in carpenter's trade with Benjamin Norton and later became a ship joiner, which was a paying avocation when shipbuilding flourished on the Piscataqua. Mr. Webster gradually drifted carpentry again, and the Kearsarge house and Cabot street school are among prominent tributes to his skill. He also remodeled three churches and built many private residences. Mr. Webster was married Jan. 2, 1849, to Sarah A. Senter. They have one son, Merritt V. Webster of Boston, and a daughter, Stella C. Webster, who resides at home. In politics he is a staunch Republican and has served as ward clerk and

CHARLIE OLIVER TACKLES BARKEEPS ALMOST ALONE

Trims 'Em, Too, With Eight Assistants, Or So They
All Swear Anyway

Charlie Oliver, with Billy Mitchell and seven other picked up assistants gamely tackled the bartenders' union on Thursday at the playgrounds, in the name of the barbers, and, most astonishing to relate, pulled off a victory, 15 to 3. That bouquet which was handed Ed Gibbons of the bartenders was a beauty. Right off the farm, it comprised no fewer than eight varieties of "posies"—a sprig of cabbage and seed corn giving great class to the cluster. Ed was so rattled by the presentation, which was made by Mr. Shaughnessy, that he couldn't get within a mile of anything batted to him, out in right field.

Frank Geyer, the urbane ex-Haverhill star, didn't show up for the game, and this gave the bartenders a tough handicap.

A "real" game between the barbers and bartenders, the second in the series, will be played later.

a member of the board of assessors for many years. He has been treasurer of St. John's lodge, No. 1, A. F. and A. M., for twenty-three consecutive years, and was worshipful master of the lodge in 1864 and 1865. He is also connected with Washington chapter Davenport council, DeWitt Clinton commandery, Knights Templar, and has attained the 32d degree.

NIGHT FIRING TO BE FEATURE OF COAST ARTILLERY ENCAMPMENT

Boats Will Have to Keep Out of the Range of Big Gun Handlers--
Officials Give Warning

One of the principal features of the present tour of duty of the Coast Artillery Corps at Port Constitution will be the night firing by six companies of regulars on the nights of Sept. 11, 12, 13 and 14.

The range will be 2500 yards, and the corps officials warn all craft to keep at least 6000 yards outside the firing radius, to avoid all possible chance of disasters.

These are the big guns that are to be fired and as the men who will handle them are expert gunners, it behooves all shipping to keep at a very respectful distance while the target practice is going on.

There will be big gun firing also between 8 and 12 a. m. on the 9th and between 1 and 3 p. m. on the 11th.

The program of the encampment from now until the close is as follows:

September 8th—A. M., artillery instruction and subcaliber practice; p. m., evening parade, night attack.

September 9th—A. M., subcaliber practice; p. m., trial shots, if service practice is to be held.

September 10th—Lectures and discussion in accordance with Par. 57, General Orders, No. 44, W. D., 1908. Payment of regular and militia troops.

September 11th—A. M., target practice; p. m., review at 4 p. m., by Governor ass.

September 12th—Breaking camp. Capt. Hancock expects 300 at his reception to the governor next Monday afternoon, at the commandant's residence, which will be followed by a dress reception at the Wentworth.

WOMAN MAYOR IS BOUND TO SHOW THEM SOMETHING

Says She Will Fill Offices With Those of Her Own Sex, To Serve Without Pay

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 8.—That she will fill all the important town offices with women friends in spite of the five men who constitute the Hinnewell city council was the statement made yesterday by Mrs. Ella Wilson, mayor of Hinnewell, Kan., following a conference with C. W. Trickett, appointed by Governor Stubbs to assist in disentangling the municipal affairs of Hinnewell.

Since Mrs. Wilson's election last spring the councilmen have steadily refused either to confirm her appointments or meet with her to transact town business, with the result that it has been impossible to make a tax levy.

"It is too late for the tax levy," said Mrs. Wilson, "but we'll get along without it. I shall appoint women who will serve without pay to the offices of town marshal, city clerk, city treasurer and commissioner of streets. I am confident that Hinnewell's affairs will be straightened out now in spite of the councilmen."

"A woman marshal could do much more than any man to root out 'blind tigers.' Women get used to smelling their husband's breath. I shall place my confidence in a woman marshal."

Blaze on Dump Proves Stubborn

Once again a still alarm brought the combination wagon to the dump on South street on Thursday. Children had set fire to paper and other rubbish. The firemen found a lively blaze on their arrival and were obliged to lay 500 feet of hose from the hydrant at the corner of Elwyn avenue. It took nearly one hour of hard work to check the blaze.

DOVE FROM WHARF TO RESCUE CHILD

Geo. H. Caswell Saves Hazel Jones
From Drowning—Many Rescues to His Credit.

Miss Hazel Jones, age 10 years, who resides with her parents on Cahol street, had a narrow escape from drowning on Thursday afternoon, and was rescued by the timely arrival of George H. Caswell, who dove from a wharf and reached the child as she was sinking for the last time.

Hazel with several children of her own age was playing about the city landing at the foot of Gates street and they were in a boat, when the little girl lost her balance and fell into the river. Unable to swim she drifted away from the boat, and raised her voice in cries for help. Her little companions being unable to assist her ran screaming up the street and they were heard by Mr. George Caswell, who was at his home on Mechanic street.

As soon as he heard the cries he knew what it meant and running down to the end of the wharf, quickly espied the struggling child sinking. Without hesitating a second he plunged head first from the end of the dock and swimming strongly he soon reached the little girl who was just sinking for the last time when he grabbed her clothing.

With the tide running down and the struggling child in his arms he was carried down stream some distance before he was able to reach the shore.

Little Hazel was almost unconscious when brought ashore, but soon came too and after being cared for by the neighbors an old dry clothing was able to go to her home.

Mr. Caswell walked home and changed his clothes and was back at work on his lobster pots in a few minutes. He took the rescue as a matter of course and said that he was glad he was at home when the accident happened. Mr. Caswell has already this summer saved four children from drowning.

GEORGE GETS HIS GREEN FLIER BACK

George Straugh's bike, the "Green Flier," has been missing for nearly two weeks. George is the all-around man at the drug store of Boardman and Norton and on the day the bike disappeared, he had left it standing against the building in the rear. He does not like hiking to any extent and has since done a lot of detective work looking up his machine. He also had other colored residents take a look at every bike that came within sight, George acting as chief in the gumshoe work.

Thursday, one of the squad, Ernest Lee, an ex-navy man and local boxing artist, got his eye on the flier on Carey street and Officer Shannon did the rest. The young man with the bike got all excited when the police grabbed it. He says some one loaned it to him. Someone else says a party sold it to them and another man says it was exchanged for his bike in the back yard one night.

The police are trying to find out how many trades and deals have taken place since the "Green Flier" disappeared on State street.

They knew its remarkable healing properties long before the medical profession began using it. To-day it is recognized as one of the greatest of all healing agents in the treatment of eczema, psoriasis, salt-rheum, ringworm, acne, scaly skin, herpes, rash, eruptions, blotches and similar skin troubles. Ask your doctor if this is not true. Oil of cade is used in making Cadum, the wonderful new remedy for skin diseases. A trial box costs but rec.

Germany's answer cannot be delayed much longer, as it is known that she is anxious to have the dispute settled before the opening of the Reichstag early in October. ### THREE POINTS OF VIEW

Out of the fog long hiding the identity of the men who are making up food prices, two or three groups are beginning to appear. The view is still confused, and the light not yet strong enough in which to throw sticks with any assurance of hitting the right mark. But in both New York and Chicago, the two largest cities of the country, some results of protracted investigations are at least promised. In Chicago an organization which months ago addressed itself to the work of finding out the "spread" in prices between the producers and the commission merchants and the retailers, and between the retailers and consumers, have completed their figures, and they declare the retailers to be "it." They show the farmer's selling prices, the transportation costs, and the commission men's figures, and then pointing at the yawning gulf between the last of these figures and these charged the consumer by the retailer, they cry out to the retailer in a voice of thunder: "Thou art the man!"

On the same day that this report was made public, delegates representing 62,000 farmers called on Mayor Gaynor of New York to ask his co-operation in devising means to abolish the middlemen who stand, in New York, between the producers and the consumers of food, increasing, as the delegates showed by figures, the last cost out of all proportion with the first. The mayor thought there might be other causes. He talked again of an increase in the gold supply, and again he talked of railway oppressions. But the producers had small faith in these theories, one of them a theory only and the other relegated through regulation, and they left determined to get in closer touch with the consumers, with or without the mayor's co-operation. They did not complain of the prices paid them, but they evidently feel that they are made to be losers through the decline in demand which excessive prices must force.

The same day brought another development which may serve to acquit the retailer, or rather, show that he too has been a victim of monopolistic conditions. On that day attorneys representing the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association notified the Department of Justice that it would plead guilty to being a combination in restraint of trade under the Sherman antitrust law. This combination has for years fixed the prices of all staple and fancy groceries to all of the retail grocers in its territory. It has fixed them at such high figures, and enforced them through such merciless employment of the boycott that retailers, compelled to carry these lines to hold their trade, have had to sell such goods only at cost price and some of them at a positive loss. If they have sought to save themselves by overcharges in other lines, let the business man who would not do as they have done, throw the first stone. At that, countless thousands of them have been forced out of business, and countless thousands more are constantly on the edge of bankruptcy. We shall have to look further. We may have caught the retailer with the high-priced goods on. But who are all the accessories before the fact?—New York World.

Cleveland, Sept. 4.—This season will probably be the last one for Connie Mack as manager of the Athletics, according to those in the know here. If the Athletics win the American league pennant and the team is in good shape for next season Mack's retirement is almost certain. Connie is a stockholder in the Athletics club and when he retires will become an officer in the club, probably president, in which capacity he would direct the club the same as Charley Comiskey directs the White Sox. Mack is forty-nine, and at times his health is not good. He has remained at home several times this season when the Athletics made short trips on the road. Another thing, Connie was married last fall and naturally prefers to be at home to traveling over the country with his team. Mack recently said his career as manager

The sixteenth annual meeting of the New Hampshire Surgical Club was held on Thursday afternoon and evening at the hotel Wentworth, with the largest attendance of members for some time. There was an interesting program and at the business meeting the following officers were elected:

The following was the program for the afternoon:

1. President's Address.
2. "Peritoneal Adhesions."

A. H. Harriman, M. D., Laconia.
Discussion opened by J. C. Haskins, M. D., Ashland.
3. "Certain Features in the Treatment of Empyema," Samuel Robinson, M. D., Boston.

5. "The Present Status of the Treatment of Sarcoma of Bone," C. B. G. de Nancréde, M. D., L. L. D., Professor of Surgery and Clinical Surgery, Michigan University, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Discussion opened by John M. Gile, M. D., Hanover.

The anniversary banquet was held in the evening and Manager Priest served one of his excellent menus. Dr. E. O. Crossman of this city was the toastmaster, and the speakers were Dr. J. W. Staples, the retiring president, Dr. McGregor, Littleton, Dr. John Gile, Hanover, Col. John H. Bartlett and Rev. Harold Folsom, Portsmouth.

Col. Bartlett's address was as follows:

"There is no service in which the public has so great an interest, as in the profession of the surgeon, which is the only human agency of saving life in so many cases. I have sometimes thought that the government either state or national or both, should employ and control all surgery for the public good. But while that may be extreme, it is certain that the state should enact all possible laws for the advancement of surgery, and the protection of those who give their lives to this public service. With your permission, I will take this opportunity to make public certain strong views which I entertain on one phase of your profession which is closely related to my own, a problem of a public nature which the events of recent years are rapidly forcing upon our attention and demanding public action."

"The principle which I have in mind is this, that the public good imperatively demands some check or limitation on the rapidly increasing malpractice lawsuits against surgeons."

"This right to sue a surgeon for damages is now absolutely unlimited. A lawyer who can raise ten cents to buy a blank writ in behalf of a worthless client with a fancied wrong, may make a declaration charging malpractice against the most reputable surgeon and may make his addendum one hundred thousand or one million dollars, as he pleases, and, without giving any bond or protection whatever, may arrest that surgeon who, without any hearing, but, as a matter of course, must go to jail until he can find bail sufficient to liberate himself and when this is done, and only this, such a sensation is made in this community and through the public press that the surgeon's reputation is ruined or smothered for life, and his mental anguish thereat is unfeigned. This is the condition of things tolerated to the condition of the law. My position is, day in this state with the full protest that it is absolutely indefensible from any standpoint whatsoever. The fact that the legal steps above suggested can so easily be taken, with with every conceivable kind of insurance available to the patient himself for any accidents or injuries or sickness or death, this kind of litigation is not really necessary for his protection.

"I do not contend that this litigation and restraints upon the same can, the right to sue absolutely denied, but I do contend that some limitations and restraints upon the same, can, and should, be made, and that it is emphatically for the public good that it be done, and that right speedily."

County Solicitor Gupilli will have in one of the largest criminal dockets before him before the Superior Court for this October term of Superior Court, a case that has been called for many years.

Policemen all over the world use TIZ. Policemen stand on their feet all day and know what sore, tender, sweaty, swollen feet really mean. They use TIZ because TIZ cures their feet right up. It keeps in perfect condition. Read what this policeman has to say: "I was surprised and delighted with TIZ for tender feet. I hardly know how to thank you enough for it. It's superior to powders or plasters. I can keep my feet in perfect condition. Believe in my earnest gratitude for TIZ. I am a policeman and keep on my feet all day."—Emzy Harrell, Austin, Texas.

THE PASSING OF SUMMER

The passing of our delightful New Hampshire summer is now being rapidly marked off. There will be warm weather, to be sure, sweltering days of both dry and humid heat, but the backbone of summer is broken. The sun has lost its greatest power, and from now on with few exceptions, the night will be cool, and the lengthening shadows tell the change of Autumn's presence, and warns to prepare for the cooler and more bracing season of the year. As the Washington Star says: "Each season has its own comforts and discomforts, its advantages and disadvantages. There is a joyous zest in the winter air as well as a cutting edge. There is a balmy fragrance in these springtime winds as well as their relaxing effects upon the disposition. The Summer brings its freedom from convention of dress as well as its roasting and melting. Perhaps the autumn compensations are best of all. The year's work is coming to a close. The harvests are being gathered. Even the failing leaves suggest accomplishment and work well done. The advancing days bring occasional chills but they are stimulating. The world takes on a beautiful tone, a coat of many colors. Physical discomforts are at an end, and in all walks of life the Autumn comes as a pleasing, helpful, friendly season."

BIRD'S EYE VIEWS

Dress experts announce that women's skirts will be tighter than ever this Winter. In brief, the proper cape is to dress more properly than ever.

The oyster season is with us and the time fast approaches when it is considered safe to add the succulent sausage to the menu that is prohibited during the warm weather.

The time when the biggest pumpkins have their innings is now at hand, and all over the great agricultural states the biggest and the best of the earth's products are receiving merited honor at the state fairs.

Brook's comet is now reported visible to the naked eye, but there is no need of borrowing trouble. The comet does not come within 45,000,000 miles of the earth.

William Burgess has swum the English channel, repeating Captain Webb's feat of a quarter of a century ago. Now let any slip of a girl heat that if she can.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES

To Whom Does It Belong?

Who owns the newspaper which a man throws away in a street or railway car? Does it immediately become the property of the corporation operating the road or does it belong to the first person who picks it up? These questions have, no doubt, often suggested themselves to passengers riding on the cars when they have noticed copies of newspapers scattered about the seats.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune, in discussing them recently, very sensibly says: "When a newspaper has been read and has served its purpose to the owner and then willfully and deliberately abandoned by him it is undoubtedly his intention to part with it forever, regardless of its future. Its abandonment in a public place does not make it the property of the corporation owning the car, until the corporation by an overt act reduces it to possession."

"This reduction to possession by the corporation or during one of its overt acts may be anyone and if a passenger in a car succeeds in exercising this right prior to the conductor or to a fellow passenger, such persons obtain title to the paper and is the lawful owner thereof. It belonged to no one and was real reform in politics if it is people taken from no one and the power cast for the Republican or the Dem-nor thereof takes lawful title."

Whether or not, remarks the Editor and Publisher this opinion is based on legislative enactment we do not know, but it is based on common sense.—Concord Patriot.

The Beach at Its Best.

Hygienically speaking, the cream of the seashore season is now in evidence. During the dry and intense heat of July one does not get the peculiar benefits accruing from living night and day right on the ocean's edge; the sun is too hot on the sands and on the water, and, moreover, the same dry heat renders more wholesome than usual the very localities to escape from which, and as an antidote to which, the seashore is especially valuable.

As the autumn, or malarial, season approaches, as inland swamps and other lowground sections become more and more poisonous; and as the changes in temperature from day to night become more marked, the sanitary value of the beach rises. Not only are diurnal changes of temperature less injurious there, but salt dampness of atmosphere is not like fresh dampness, and the briny air counteracts most of the effects of the rainy spells. To be sure, sea-bathing is not so pleasant for most people as it is in early and mid-summer, but for those able to enjoy it at all, a short dip at any time during the latter part of August and during September and October is of equal value as a tonic with the longer immersions of June and July.

For all who dread the acute malady particularly attendant upon the change of season from Summer to Autumn, the beach is strongly to be recommended; and one cannot but think that, as a rule, in New England, the beach season begins too early and ends too soon. One hears, for example, a good deal of commendation nowadays of the "veranda habit"—a habit which most of us can only indulge in the evening; but, inland, after the middle of August, sitting out of doors at those hours, especially when tired and even if warmly clothed, is rather a precarious experiment except for the very young or the very vigorous; whereas, surprising although the novice finds it, the same experiment at the beach seldom proves dangerous and is almost always very refreshing and of great hygienic value, even well into the Autumn. From about the 20th of August until the frosts come, or until the snow begins to fly, the beach is the king of health resorts.—Boston Transcript.

REPUBLICAN SUCCESS.

No one interested in politics can have forgotten so soon that among the most striking results of the 1910 campaign were the Democratic victories in our neighboring states, Maine and Massachusetts, and the splendid record of Republican success here in New Hampshire.

We elected our Republican candidate for governor by a majority much increased over the vote of 1908. In the midst of a national massacre of congressmen both our Republican representatives to Washington were returned for another term. The five men elected to the executive council were all Republicans and so were large majorities in both branches of the legislature. This attitude at the polls of the voters of New Hampshire assumed an aspect of national interest and importance such as no other election in this state for many years had attained.

Now this question comes for consideration to the Republican voters of this state: Can we and shall we equal the showings we made in 1910 at the even more important presidential election polls of 1912?

That we can do so is not a matter of doubt. New Hampshire is, and always has been, a Republican state so far as national issues are concerned and not once has failed thus to render her verdict. As to home conditions the count of the ballots in November, 1910, showed that the people appreciated, believed in and endorsed the housecleaning within the Republican party of the state; that the party had renewed and strengthened its hold upon the voters of New Hampshire. To a large extent the state issues of 1910 are those of 1911 and will be those of 1912. The administration title thereto forever, regardless of its future. Its abandonment in a public place does not make it the property of the corporation owning the car, until the corporation by an overt act reduces it to possession.

"This reduction to possession by the corporation or during one of its overt acts may be anyone and if a passenger in a car succeeds in exercising this right prior to the conductor or to a fellow passenger, such persons obtain title to the paper and is the lawful owner thereof. It belonged to no one and was real reform in politics if it is people taken from no one and the power cast for the Republican or the Dem-

Hanna

I have read many versions of my first interview with Mark Hanna. Frequently I have read what purported to be the story of how I came to put him in dollar-mark clothes. All of them have shown good imagination on the part of their authors, but are a long way from the truth. I drew my first pictures of Mr. Hanna from a description of the man given me by Alfred Henry Lewis, who had just come from a few days' visit with him in Ohio. It would be unfair to Mr. Lewis to attribute my conception to the description he gave me. But Mark Hanna's portrait as I first used it was not so much a reproduction of his features as they really were, but as we wanted to show them for political purposes. Lewis told me that when he met him Hanna wore a business man's checked suit, and my first pictures showed him dressed in this manner. I put dollar marks on his cuff buttons, which was as stupid a thing as any cartoonist could have done. Then a few days later, in the early part of 1896, I drew a cartoon of him in which I wished to convey the idea of "boodle," and put the dollar marks in the open checks of his clothes. The night editor "killed" the cartoon on account of these dollar marks, explaining that he did not see that it added anything to the picture. When Mr. Hearst arrived at the office about midnight he saw the cartoon and ordered it run as I had drawn it, the dollar marks being especially emphasized.

A few weeks thereafter I was much surprised when I saw, but not met, Mark Hanna, that there was plenty of foundation in his features, with the proper amount of exaggeration, to produce a face like the one I had been drawing. I was sitting in the Senate reception room one day on the still hunt for feature pictures, with one knee folded high over the other to shield my sketch book. Big game gathered all about me so closely that I couldn't draw. So I tried to impersonate a country constituent, who might be waiting for a reply to a card which he had sent in to his senator. While I was affecting this disguise an interesting looking old colored man sent in his card to Senator Hanna. Hanna did not know me by sight and in answer to the colored man's card he came into the very corner where I was located. Here, after exchanging warm greetings, the Senator said: "Well, Dr. Brown of Georgia, you got my last letter?" "Yes," replied the venerable dandy. "Well, Doctor, we have exchanged many letters, I might have gone to Georgia and had hard work finding you. How is it that the minute that I came into the room you immediately picked me out?"

The old colored man's features fit up with fifty blithely unseen wrinkles of expression. He responded: "Senator Hanna, I know you by your pictures." Whereat there was hearty prolonged laughter tinged with a slightly grim note on the part of the Senator. Stopping the embarrassed dandy, Hanna took him by the coat and resumed in a whispering tone: "I hope it was not through certain malicious and vicious pictures that you have recognized me." The old colored man's wrinkles reverted and his face grew cautious yet very kindly as he said, apparently before he realized what he was saying, "Yes, Senator Hanna, by them very ones. They don't look a bit like you, but I somehow knew you by them in a minute." All this time I sat scarcely two feet away from them, my heart beating loudly with a sort of buck ache.

Through the campaign of '96 and following it up to the next presidential campaign, that of 1900, of course I saw Mr. Hanna often. Whether my cartoons of him were beyond the limit of the scope and freedom of the cartoonist's license, has been discussed pro and con by competent authorities and the question is still debatable.

My first meeting with Senator Hanna took place at the Republican National Headquarters in New York City at the close of the '96 campaign.

Some genius in his employ conceived the idea that a meeting between the great political boss and myself would be an interesting affair, that it might promise some action of a spectacular nature. When I was ushered into his spacious office he greeted me in a hearty manner, yet this heartiness seemed to have a string attached. As I remember he said: "Davenport I admire your genius and your power of execution, but I think your conception of me is damnable and ridiculous. You have nothing to fear from me, but I would advise you not to let Mrs. Hanna lay eyes on you."

From what I had heard from others I could well imagine how Mrs. Hanna had suffered as the result of my pictures, and it lay on my conscience. At the death of Senator Hanna I drew a cartoon that appeared in the Cincinnati Enquirer showing the Senator on his death-bed with Uncle Sam kneeling to note the failing pulse, while the shade of McKinley stood close by waiting to lead his friend across the valley of the shadow. Gradually, as I had been making all of the other cartoons of him, I realized that Senator Hanna was growing in the esteem of the public. Therefore, he could not be wholly the man that I had pictured and, as convincingly as I could, I made that last one an atonement.

As evidence of a woman's power of forgiveness, this picture was greatly valued by the wife I had got my last letter? "Yes," replied the venerable dandy. "Well, Doctor, we have exchanged many letters, I might have gone to Georgia and had hard work finding you. How is it that the minute that I came into the room you immediately picked me out?" The old colored man's features fit up with fifty blithely unseen wrinkles of expression. He responded: "Senator Hanna, I know you by your pictures." Whereat there was hearty prolonged laughter tinged with a slightly grim note on the part of the Senator. Stopping the embarrassed dandy, Hanna took him by the coat and resumed in a whispering tone: "I hope it was not publican success in New Hampshire lies in the possible effect upon the popular mind of an existing newspaper campaign which is characterized by distortion of facts, misrepresentation of conditions and unwarranted and abusive attacks upon individuals. Some of the newspapers joining in this campaign are owned and edited by Democrats; others are owned and edited by Republicans; one, at least, this campaign are owned and edited by Democrats. But all are co-operating, in a way which suggests a concerted plan and a definite leadership, to discredit the deeds of the present Republican administration.

In order to place these attacks upon their proper plane and help the people to estimate them for just what they are worth it may be necessary to show in what degree they are inspired by partisan politics; to what extent certain interests are responsible for their origin; and how many of those engaged in their circulation are men of thwarted ambitions, lost offices and other personal grievances.

With these facts generally understood we are confident that the present Republican administration in New Hampshire, honestly judged upon what it has done, is doing and proposes to do, need have no fear of the verdict upon its work returned by the voters of the state in November, 1912.

Abuse and calumny will fail of their purpose, as has been the case almost always in our politics, and New Hampshire will retain her honorable place in the van of staunchly Republican states.—Concord Monitor.

NAVY YARD MANAGEMENT

The return of Secretary Meyer to Washington about September 14 is awaited with considerable interest, as there will be probably some disclosure of the intention of the head of the Navy Department respecting the management of navy yards. The report of the civilian experts employed by the government, it is understood at the instance of President Taft, is in possession of the naval authorities, as has been stated in these columns. The findings of that commission have not been disclosed, and it is not known whether they were furnished to the special board of naval officers of which Rear Admiral C. E. Vreeland is the president and which has been convened to make recommendations pertaining to navy-yard management. The sessions of that special board have been suspended owing to the absence of Rear Admiral Vreeland and the necessity of the presence of Naval Constructor H. A. Evans, member of the board, on the west coast as a witness in a admiralty case. It is expected that the work of several subcommittees, which is progressing in the meantime, will be presented to the full board about September 10 and that a report will be made to the secretary about the first of October. It is possible, also, that there will be a minority report, as it is in evidence up to this time there is a radical difference of opinion among the members of the board, as was destined to be the case. It has remained a mystery why Secretary Meyer made up a board of elements which were bound to be more or less conflicting in the conclusion sought by the membership. When the original board navy yard management was selected with Rear Admiral William Swift at its head, every effort was made by the secretary of the navy to have harmonious proceedings, the membership being composed of line officers. In the case of the Vreeland board there are four staff officers, two line officers, who were formerly of the staff, and three line officers with no previous staff affiliation. It may be expected, by those who know something of the personality of some

Gleanings From Files of Portsmouth Chronicle

A few days since a man started to walk to this city from Kennebunk, Me., stating he wished to enlist as a volunteer. He came along safely and easily until he reached the Portsmouth bridge when he found it impossible to raise the two cents wherewith to pay his toll, and was refused a pass. He accordingly went to the point just above the bridge, and attempted to swim across; but being encumbered by the weight of his clothes, he was in imminent danger of being carried down by the current and drowned. A passing boat, however, rescued him and brought him to this side, where, perhaps, he was better pleased with the Towles.

Messrs. Editors: In taking a walk at the south part of our city, I was attracted by the obelisk of business to enter the Iron Foundry of Mr. P. Drake on Mechanic street. I was surprised to find so large a number of men at work and the amount of castings turned out per day. On inquiry of the proprietor, I was pleased to learn that he had some large contracts out of the city to fill, and had prospects of others; besides he had considerable work for our citizens and places bordering on us. My attention was also attracted by a vessel one of our Portsmouth packets, unloading a large lot of pig iron at the foundry wharf, and him Beelzebub.

We are informed that a young couple in a neighboring town named their infant boy Jeff Davis. We doubt it; but it reminds us of that other couple, who wishing to have their boy a Scripture name, called him Beelzebub.

TO THE VOTERS OF MAINE

If you had a child or loved one seriously ill, wouldn't you do all in your power to get that child well? Or, better still, wouldn't you keep that loved one free from illness, so that there would be no need of the fear and danger attendant on serious illness? So, also, if you saw some one in danger of being run down by an auto, an electric car, tann, or anything of that sort, or, if they were in danger of going over a precipice, or drowning, or in any terrible danger, ought not you, or we, to warn them—to do all in our power to save them from physical

That is why we do and ought to, take an interest in preventing any possibility of the saloons ever re-entering Maine, our beloved state, where we were born and brought up, and of whose temperance record we are justly proud, and which has been an incentive to many other states to follow in the Prohibition movement, and whose progress is now watched eagerly by those same states and many others, which will, we hear, stand or fall with us.

The law is not perfectly kept, we own; but what law is? As long as there are laws, until the millennium comes, they will be broken; but when the loving, forgiving spirit of Christ, who would have us do to our neighbor as we would have him do to us, comes, then there will be no more saloons or saloon keepers, no more tempters to do evil, but a general desire to do good and have everyone make the best of himself, and so bring a Heaven to hungering, waiting souls here on earth.

The man who drinks is not happy afterward. He is ashamed of the habit and sorry to have his friends learn of it. Do not allow the saloon to come into the state and then expect people to keep away from it. Some will, by the grace of God, do so; but many weak ones, and many apparently strong ones, will be ruined, body and soul, if this evil comes into our state. If allowed to come, woe to the state! woe to the citizens! It would do more harm than earthquakes or cyclones. They only destroy the body, while spiritual vitiators destroy both body and soul, earthly and future happiness.

Let every good honest man do his best to keep Prohibition in the Constitution. Prohibition, even if its laws are sometimes broken, as all laws are, is far better than any form of local option or license, as is proven by statistics in every state. Leave a blessing to your children instead of a curse and blight.

Every good man should see to it that he votes, and votes right on the coming election day in Maine. The way each man votes not only concerns himself and his own immediate family, but every family and generations to come who will reside in this state. It also influences all the states whether we stand or fall. Whoever votes for license is helping the devil in the world, and it will be but a short time before he will regret it. His own family may be afflicted with the drink curse. We don't wish such horrible crimes to come into our state as occurred in Portsmouth so recently—a terrible murder. Such things always follow the saloon. Please think the matter over very carefully and not do any thing that will bring regret and sorrow to yourself and others afterward when it is too late.

THE CHILD LABOR LAW

It is Designed to Prevent Placing Children in Factories Out of School Hours

In a recent issue of a Manchester paper a sharp attack was made upon the law passed at the last session of the legislature, relating to child labor; the first section of the act reads:

Section 1. No child under the age of twelve shall be employed, or permitted or suffered to work, in, about, or in connection with, any mill, factory, workshop, quarry, mine, or establishment, tenement, house, manufactory, workshop, store, business office, telegraph or telephone office, restaurant, bakery, hotel, barber shop, apartment house, bootblack stand or parlor or in the distribution or transmission of merchandise or messages; nor shall any child under the age of fourteen be employed or permitted or suffered to work in any of the aforesaid while the public schools are in session in the district in which he resides.

In the course of the discussion the question was asked, "Does the Child Labor act prohibit the employment of children under 14 years of age before and after the daily session of school?"

"Most certainly it does," replied Supt. Morrison. "The state in this act ranges itself in line with the most enlightened states on the continent; it proposes to preserve to the child the right to a childhood."

"No kind of conservation is more important to the nation than the conservation of its childhood."

"It is very far from such reasonable protection of childhood to allow a child to work in a factory from 3.30 a. m. to school time, and then from 4 or 4.30 p. m. to 7."

We have seen in the past far too many little children in the public schools stupefied by early morning and night work-stupefied beyond the possibility of deriving any good from school or any joy from childhood.

"This state no longer stands for that sort of thing, and the school officials will not, I think, be greatly deterred by editorial pedantry."

As to our friend who takes his little girl into his store Saturday afternoon, the child labor law does not in any way interfere with the ordinary helpfulness of children to parents; but it will not allow parents to exploit either their own children or those of anybody else.

Supt. Morrison had heretofore made official ruling on the question, "Is a parent employing his own child in violation of the child labor law?" in which he said:

"There is probably a difference between the employment of children by their parent in a retail store or some similar employment during vacation time, and the employment of a child in a factory, in the manufacture of goods, and pos-

SILVER WEDDING

In receiving by their two daughters Florence and Beatrice Baker and by Mrs. Baker's mother, Mrs. H. J. French, formerly of North Danville. The silver wedding couple received many useful and costly presents.

Mr. Baker was born in Portsmouth, Aug. 1, 1861, the son of Samuel and Caroline (Wingate) Baker, and he is a descendant of a family prominent in history. His mother was a granddaughter of the famous Paine Wingate, who was a delegate to the first continental congress, the first senator from New Hampshire and friend of George Washington. She was also a sister to Joseph C. A. Wingate, a former consul to Swatow and Pouchow, China. Another interesting phase of his kinship is a connection to the family of former President Roosevelt, whose first wife was a Lee and a connection to the Wingates.

He was married to Fannie French of North Danville Sept. 7, 1886, at the home of her parents in that town, by Rev. George E. Street, then pastor of the Phillips Congregational church in Exeter. Mrs. Baker is also a descendant of a prominent family of the state, and is a relative of former Gov. N. J. Bachelier.

Mr. Baker has been a resident of Exeter since 1872, and is now a well known insurance and real estate dealer. Both Mr. and Mrs. Baker are prominent in church and social circles, being members of the Phillips church. Mr. Baker is a past grand of Sagamore Lodge, I. O. O. F., past master of Gilman Grange, elder and treasurer of the Phillips church, a trustee of Robinson Seminary, past sacheim of Wehahowowit Tribe of Red Men and president of the Exeter board of Trade.

He represented Exeter in the last legislature, being clerk of the house committee on banks. Mr. and Mrs. Baker have two daughters, Florence who is now a student at the Bradford, Mass., academy and a graduate from Robinson Seminary, and Beatrice, who was a member of the graduating class last June at the Robinson Seminary.

OLD-TIME REMEDY

DARKENS THE HAIR

Gives Color, Lustre to Faded and Gray Hair--Dandruff Quickly Removed

From time immemorial, sage and alumn have been used for the hair and scalp. Almost everyone knows the value of such a combination of darkening the hair, for curing dandruff and falling hair, and for making the hair grow.

In olden times the only way to get hair tonic of this sort was to brew in the home fireplace, a method which was troublesome and not always satisfactory. Nowadays almost every up-to-date druggist can supply his patrons with a ready-to-use product, skillfully compounded in perfectly equipped laboratories.

Dr. Wyeth Chemical Company of New York puts up an ideal remedy of this sort, called Wyeth's Sage and Alumn Hair Remedy, and authorizes druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

If you have dandruff, or if your hair is turning gray or coming out, don't delay, but get a bottle of this remedy today, and see what a few days' treatment will do for you.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

Special Agent G. E. Philbrick, 45 Congress St.

POISONOUS MUSHROOMS

Ten persons in New York city have died within the past few days from eating poisonous mushrooms. A news dispatch from New Rochelle tells of the wiping out of an entire family on the same cause, and reports of fatal results from the eating of supposed edible fungi are unusually common throughout the country. The prevailing wet weather has been favorable to development of mushrooms and it is not improbable that the recent high cost of living has had something to do with the increase in their use by those who are unable to distinguish between the safe and the poisonous varieties. It is greatly to be regretted that the use of a valuable food product should continue to be accompanied by so much peril, but apparently mushrooms are growing wild can never be eaten with safety by the general run of people until there is established a rigid system of inspection. The mushrooms which caused so many deaths in New York are said to have been sold to consumers by Italian vendors who are ignorant of the characteristics of specials which they sold. If there were a system of inspection in such a city as New York through which all mushrooms gathered in the country round should pass before being offered for sale, here might be considerable sums of money earned by the gatherers, while an important adjunct of the food supply could be utilized. It is not necessary to accept the extreme statement of some enthusiasts to the effect that a pound of mushrooms is equal in food value to a pound of good steak, or the assertion of the professor of mycology in a western university that the mushrooms which go to waste in the United States are equal to the entire crop of cereals, but any one who has made the test knows that they are highly nourishing, and common observation is sufficient to show their abundance in favorable seasons. Unhappily there are several species that are deadly and to the uninitiated these poisonous mushrooms are as inviting as the edible ones, if not even more so. The only safe way for a person who is ignorant of the characteristics of the poisonous species is to consult an expert or leave all but the cultivated variety severely alone. This, too, when there are at his very time tons of nourishing food going to waste in the fields, pastures and woods, even along the roadsides within easy reach of every city and important town. Some day this waste will cease, for places of inspection will be provided, where competent inspectors will pass upon the edibility of mushrooms brought into market, and the assurance of safety will lead to a demand which render the gathering of the fungi profitable. In the mean time it is little to the credit of human being in general that they know less about mushrooms than do the squirrels, which long ago learned their food value and how to distinguish between them--Manchester Union.

THE ATLANTIC FLEET DOING GREAT WORK

Washington, Sept. 7.—The Atlantic fleet is accomplishing much in the solution of the problems of war by the target practice now in progress off the Chesapeake capes, according to advices to the navy department. These exercises will determine primarily the effectiveness of long range firing.

Battles of the future will be fought at long ranges, between a maximum and minimum of 16,000 and 8,000 yards, and the present practice is expected to yield much valuable information in regard to efficiency of the gun crews and how far the guns of various calibre can be depended upon to hit with any degree of accuracy.

At the close of every day Rear Admiral Hugo Osterhaus sends a wireless message to the acting secretary of the navy, stating that he has completed "problem A" or "problem B."

This means much to the officials and the officers of the navy, but very little of the information will leak to the public. It will be always enshrouded with secrecy, in order that no foreign power may learn just what this country is doing with naval ordnance problems. The comparative records of the various ships, it is said, may be published when the exercises are concluded. The real accomplishments, however, will be kept confidential.

Naval officers here today declared that the practice had proceeded with greater celerity than had been anticipated. The battleship Delaware may complete its long range experimental firing at the old battleship San Marcos next week.

These tests according to report, were suddenly terminated temporarily several days ago by Rear Admiral Osterhaus, because the Delaware by mistake fired at the repair ship Panther, standing 1,500 yards away from the San Marcos. The big guns of the Delaware are expected to shatter the San Marcos to pieces in the forthcoming experiments, and then the remains of the old ship will be sold for junk.

actorious through her connection with the Beattie murder trial had started north "to go on the stage," many of the leaders of woman thought in this city protested that such an exposition of Miss Binford would be an "insult to all woman kind."

A local booking agent is credited with the statement that the Binford girl will appear at a Philadelphia theatre next Monday. Asked as to her historic abilities he said her act probably would consist of a couple songs.

"It really does not matter what she does," he is alleged to have added, "so long as the people have a chance to look at her."

Beulah Binford was released from denver county jail at Richmond Va., yesterday. She remained in prison until later in the day, packing her clothing and toilet accessories. Shortly afterward the cause of her delay was disclosed in the appearance at the jail of agents for a New York film company. They held a private conference with the woman and a little while later she announced that she had signed a contract with them and would go with them to New York to pose for moving picture productions.
